abstract:

The fragility and the environmental, social and economic vulnerability that characterize several territories make the need to integrate the multiple aspects of sustainability into the decision-making processes concerning the definition of plans and programs of investment increasingly urgent. This, especially in the tourism and in the food sector. In this context, the objective of this research is to integrate and test a dataset of indicators of the impacts of the tourism sector and the food system on the quality of life of people, on the attractiveness of European regions and on migratory phenomena. The research involves the development of econometric models useful for the purposes mentioned above. This dataset is obtained by defining an analysis procedure aimed at: selecting scientifically valid indicators, readily available by the analysts and easy to interpret by stakeholders; weighing the indicators themselves based on criteria shared in the literature; taking into account the uniqueness of the territorial reference system. The new indexes of environmental sustainability will be used to integrate a decision support systems (DSS) that will take the form of operative and user-friendly dashboards where stakeholders involved in the H2020 SmarCulTour and CITIES2030 projects will look for information and new knowledge. Activities will regard: 1. to evaluate the impacts of the industrial sectors considered in the projects on the quality of life of people and on the migratory flow 2. adapting and designing new index in relation to the areas studied; 3. development of econometric models; 4. collecting data and trends from local realities to better define the representativeness of chosen indexes; 5. Project management, communication, dissemination and promotion of research phases, partial and final results relating to the research activity itself and the project (such as meetings, conferences, presentations, newsletters, etc.) are also required. The researcher will therefore be employed in both the SmartCultour project and the Cities2030 project for a total of hours and costs that meet the activities envisaged in the cards of these projects..
