Title: One Health and open data governance and epistemology

Scientific disciplinary sector and/or disciplines specifically identified by the call:

M-DEA/01 Demology, ethnology and anthropology

SPS/07 General sociology

SPS/08 Sociology of culture and communication

SPS/10 Urban and environmental sociology

M-FIL/02 Logic and Philosophy of Science

- Scientific coordinator and tutor: prof. Roberta Raffaetà
- Duration: 12 months, renewable up to maximum of 36 months

Abstract:

HealthXCross is an ethnographic study of open-data platforms that compare and aggregate microbial data across time, space, species and disciplines. These platforms aggregate – through advanced AI technology - microbial data with other kinds of data (medical, environmental, social etc...) in the attempt of reconfiguring concepts and practices of health for intervening in both environmental and human health.

Within this broad framework, the candidate will focus on one specific platform with a One Health approach in partnership with an important technological hub for the aggregation of data. The platform has started during the COVID pandemic with the aim to understand its mechanisms of action, offering a structure to analyse the interaction between human and environmental health even beyond the pandemic. The platform includes a number of international partners and interdisciplinary sub-projects.

The candidate will have to analyse, within the 'One/planetary health' theoretical debate, the interplay between 'data governance' of open-data and 'data epistemology'. The latter one refers to the biopolitics of knowledge at play in One/planetary health, an approach that aims at blurring the boundaries between disciplines and between humans and non-humans. Themes to be analysed by the candidate: politics and practices of open-data; interdisciplinary and data science; biopolitics of One/planetary health at the interface between human and non-human' health.

The candidate will conduct an ethnography of the platform. The ethnography will start online, through the participation in the network' online meetings and will proceed with a focus on one or more specific sub-projects/themes of the platform, ideally (mobility permitting) including fieldwork in selected sites.

The candidate will critically analyse the work of the scientists involved in the platform. She/he will also work closely with them, therefore a collaborative and participative attitude is required. The aim of the project is indeed to produce useful knowledge both for the community under study and for the scholarly community at large.

He/She will be required to conduct research at the interface between conceptual analysis, ethnography and empirical outputs, and demonstrate an ability to integrate project results originating from different disciplinary fields. The fellow will contribute to the timely delivery of the outputs set out by the research project, and to the dissemination of the results of the project in compliance with the research framework envisaged by the project.

Art. 2 – Requirements for participation in the selection procedure
