Description

The Department of Management at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia invites application for a two-years fellowship in: Port-city interaction, between urban regeneration and economic transformation, under the supervision of prof. Stefano Micelli, SSD SECS-P/08 (Management).

Abstract: The research project aims to analyze the role of the Venetian Port Authority as a key actor in the process of urban regeneration, starting from an analysis of the potential of the port areas that insist on the Venetian historical center. The transformation of logistic functions and the reorganization of value chains have profoundly modified the factors of competitiveness of the port of Venice. The role of the port areas located in the historic center is now at the center of an intense debate that foreshadows a significant role of the Port Authority in the more general process of revitalization of the city's historic center. The research grant aims at supporting an investigation that will evaluate a series of case studies of European cities, both port and non-port, that have focused on urban regeneration through the change of use of disused areas to promote and develop cultural and creative industries in the broadest sense. After conducting a comparative study of a sufficient number of cases, the research will focus on the specific features of the Venetian context to identify a range of tools and policies to be submitted to the parties involved in the economic and social revitalization of the city.

The research shall be carried out in Italian and English language. The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia.
