Description

The Department Philosophy and Cultural Heritage at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia invites applications for a fellowship in:

Title: Territorial inequalities and left behind areas in Italy

SSD: SPS/07

Abstract: The EXIT Project (funded by the Horizon Europe Program) analyzes territorial inequalities in Europe and identifies strategies and interventions to reduce them, focusing on “left behind areas”. Exit project examines the determinants of territorial inequalities and the conditions of “left behind areas”, on what guides the perception of these areas represented with the concept of “left behindness”. Knowledge is produced through a bottom-up and interdisciplinary approach based on the transferability of practices, with mixed methods and with an intersectional approach.

The research fellow will participate in the main activities of the project: 1) analysis of the use of the “left behind” concept in policy discourses and expert interviews on “left behind”; 2) mapping policy drivers of territorial inequality and policies for development of ‘left-behind’ areas (focus groups with stakeholders and policymakers, online survey on key policies); 3) overviewing and mapping territorial inequalities through quantitative and official regional data; 4) analyzing experiences and perceptions of territorial inequality through ethnographic research; 5) identifying strategies and practices to address territorial inequalities through ethnographic research; 6) identifying cooperation and transferability practices.

The research fellow, who is required to participate in project meetings, will contribute to the drafting of the reports.

The research may be carried out in English.

The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia.
