Description

The Department of Linguistic and Comparative Cultural studies at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia invites applications for a fellowship in:

Title: Myths of Legitimation and Government of Difference in the European Imperial Regimes during the Modern and Contemporary Age

Scientific area: M-STO/02, M-STO/03, M-STO/04, L-OR/13, SPS/03

Abstract:

The research fellowship will be part of a “research project of national interest” (PRIN), which aspires to place Italian historiography in a more systematic and mutually productive connection with one of the most relevant trends that has been developing in international historiography for more than a quarter of a century now, the so called “imperial turn”.

At the core of this scholarly research agenda there has been the attempt to employ the conceptual innovations emerged from two other momentous methodological “turns” – the cultural and the global ones – in order to revisit traditional themes of imperial history as the processes of empire-building, the center-periphery and metropolis-colonies relations, nation-building and empire dismantling, the ideologies of imperial legitimation, the representation of imperial and colonial Other.

The adoption of the new global and cultural perspectives has also encouraged researches focused on entanglements, connections, interactions, transfers and comparisons among the long-term histories of different imperial and post-imperial spaces and territories. The research agenda of the “new imperial history” was strongly influenced by the contemporary perception that the world after the 1989-91 conferred an unexpected political relevance to the empires, as regimes based on various and evolving forms of government of difference.

The research fellow will give a contribution to the above-mentioned PRIN research project by focusing on one case-study linked to the Habsburg and/or Ottoman empire and/or to their post-imperial legacies in the 20th centuries.
