Establishes the following:

Art. 1 - Scope

1. A public selection is announced to award 1 research fellowship lasting 12 months, with the possibility of renewal within the limits of art. 2 of the Regulations on university research fellowship awarding, which will be subject to a specific contract.

The expected starting date is October 2023.

The research fellowship amounts to Euro 19.367,00 per year gross to the recipient, net of the expenses to be sustained by the employer. The amount may be subject to adjustment in the event of variations in the law.

2. The research fellowship is awarded for the purpose of collaboration with the following research programme of the Dipartimento di Scienze Ambientali, Informatica e Statistica:

- Title: CarbON exchange processes across STReAm INterfaces (CONSTRAIN)
- scientific disciplinary sector and/or disciplines specifically identified by the call: ICAR/02
- scientific coordinator and tutor: Prof. Enrico Bertuzzo
- duration: 12 months
- abstract: The research fellowship will work in the context of the PRIN project CONSTRAIN. Streams and rivers have long been considered as simple “pipelines” channeling organic carbon from soils to the oceans, and only recently the key contribution of these highly reactive systems to the global carbon cycle has been recognized. The complexity of the problem is linked to the tight hydrological and biogeochemical connections of fluvial ecosystems with the surrounding environment through the stream interfaces, namely the lower (benthic and hyporheic zones), the lateral (riparian areas), and the upper (the atmosphere) interface. In particular, organic carbon delivered from the terrestrial ecosystem or produced in the stream ecosystem can be respired by heterotrophic organisms to carbon dioxide (CO<sub>2</sub>) ultimately evading to the atmosphere. CO<sub>2</sub> is the primary greenhouse gas and contributes to the heat trapping capacity of the modern atmosphere. Recent estimates indicate CO<sub>2</sub> emissions from streams and rivers are of similar magnitude to terrestrial CO<sub>2</sub> fluxes on an areal basis. However, the above estimates are largely uncertain because current research has often disregarded the impact of hydrodynamic and morphologic traits on in-stream carbon cycling and CO<sub>2</sub> emissions, and the key role of mass exchange terms across different stream interfaces. The CONSTRAIN project aims at filling this gap through an integrated framework encompassing theoretical and observational studies across different disciplines. Operatively, the project will pursue 3 main objectives, namely: 1) a detailed characterization of the hydrological flowpaths along fluvial ecosystems at the local and reach scale based on the coupling between hydrochemical measurements and physically-based models; 2) the analysis of the main biogeochemical and hydromorphological processes controlling metabolic activities and CO<sub>2</sub> emissions; 3) the analysis of the implications for the upscaling of processes and fluxes at the network level. The research fellowship will focus on objective 2. The project activities include: i) spatially distributed measurements of water quality, hydromorphological features and outgassing rates in selected focus reaches of two experimental sites with contrasting climatic conditions in northern and southern Italy; and ii) a novel conceptual framework for the development of a comprehensive physically based model, aimed at the description of in-stream carbon dynamics accounting for the effect of all the processes taking place at the stream interfaces. All these data and models will be used to develop robust upscaling procedures that retain the effect of local heterogeneity. The CONSTRAIN project will enhance our understanding of the role played by spatial and temporal hydrologic variability on the metabolism of complex river networks, unraveling the multifaceted dynamical relationships that link rivers with the surrounding environment and allowing a robust assessment of the contribution of freshwater systems to CO<sub>2</sub> emissions.

3. The selection aims to ascertain the scientific-professional requirements deemed necessary to carry out the above research activities.

Art. 2 – Requirements for participation in the selection procedure

1. Citizens belonging to European Union member states and non-community citizens in possession of the following qualifications may take part in the selection:
