Description

The Department of Humanities at Ca' Foscari University of Venice (Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici dell'Università Ca' Foscari Venezia) invites applications for a fellowship in: “Political Discourse and Communal Living in Ancient Anatolia”, Academic discipline: L-OR/04 Anatolian Studies, duration 36 months, tutor Dr. Annick Payne, financed by the ERC COG project “CAncAn - Communication in Ancient Anatolia”, Grant Agreement n. 101088363, CUP: H73C23000170006, Principal Investigator Dr. Annick Payne.

Abstract: The researcher will work on text from Ancient Anatolia, specifically from and on the Lydians, Phrygians and Luwians; comparing internal and external perspective, to gain insight into the construction of identity. The scientific goal of studying political discourse and communal living is to gather new insight into identity formation. The researcher will analyze texts for political frameworks and interaction; adding them to a shared project database; visualizing findings on places of conflicts and representation of power on maps; relating results to religious and linguistic communities. The researcher will exchange with project colleagues, in particular on aspects of narrative bias and construction of narrative. This research will illuminate the construction of historical events, interaction and parameters and differences of political vs. other identities, making visible processes of identity formation. The research will be carried out in English.

The research may be carried out in English.

The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at Ca' Foscari University of Venice.
