Description

The Department of Management at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia invites application for one 18-month fellowship in Individual behavior and social interactions in the study of communicable diseases and their impact on economic activity, under the supervision of prof. Marco Tolotti (SSD SECS-S/06 - Mathematical methods of economics, finance and actuarial sciences).

Project acronym: PRIN 2022 “Communicable diseases and economic activity: individual behavior, social interactions and macroeconomic outcomes “ n. 20227339KC – CUP H53D23002220006

A full copy of the approved project will be provided to the selected applicant.

Abstract: This project aims at disentangling the numerous channels through which different forms of public policy can be used to reduce the harmful implications of communicable diseases by targeting different objectives, from the single individual up to the society. Methodologically, we will rely on a multidisciplinary approach based on theoretical models, simulations, ABMs and empirical frameworks to assess the desirability of alternative policy options from both normative and positive perspectives. In particular, we will use an array of methods aiming at characterizing both individual behavior at a microeconomic level and its aggregate effects at a macroeconomic level in order to run counterfactual and scenarios analysis of the implications of different policy measures on the national (Italian) and international levels.

The research may be carried out in Italian and English.

The fellowship is intended to provide the successful candidate with the opportunity to pursue his/her own research while benefiting from the range of expertise at Università Ca' Foscari Venezia.

Who can apply

Prospective candidates are expected to hold a master's degree in Economics, Mathematics, Statistics, Computer Science, Physics or equivalent degrees and scientific-professional curriculum suitable to the development of research activities related to the fellowship.
