Abstract:

In regional health services there is a progressive centralization of technical-administrative services dictated by the introduction of intermediate level of governance (Azienda Zero) between the regional level and the Local Health Agencies responsible for providing services to citizens. For some types of service, in particular those that have a territorial nature, the procurement process remains at local level.

The research aims to study the procurement process of social and healthcare services and has to provide operational indications for healthcare Agencies. In particular, the research explores the possibilities provided by the Procurement Code (Codice degli Appalti) and the opportunities opened by the Third Sector Code (Codice del Terzo Settore), through the administrative procedure of co-planning.

The activity includes analysis of the legislation, case studies, analysis of experiences and experts operating in the healthcare sector and production of guidelines/indications useful for the application of procurement procedures in the context described
