Demand System for the Repo Market: Implications for Repo and Treasury Pricing

funded by the project's general expenses PRIN_2022 Project: "Econometric and Macro-Financial Models of Climate Change: Transition, Policies and Extreme Events, CUP H53D23002190006

- SSD: ECON-02/A; GSD: 13/ECON-02
- scientific coordinator and tutor Prof.ssa Loriana Pelizzon
- duration: 3 months, starting from February 2026

The research fellowship is awarded for the purpose of collaboration with the following research programme of the Department of Economics:

Abstract:

Using a novel regulatory dataset (the Securities Financing Transactions Data Store, SFTDS), we characterize investor roles in the repo market of a safe asset: the German Bund. We identify securities suppliers - treasury and the central bank - and demanders - hedge funds. We show that investor participation affects repo specialness and estimate the price elasticity of each investor type. The repo market displays a very elastic supply and a very inelastic demand, The inelasticity of the demand originates from hedge funds securities borrowing which are likely engaging in the basis trade

The research fellowship amounts to Euro 5.010,13 =. gross to the recipient and will be subject to taxation in accordance with the regulations in force.
