The research fellowship is awarded for the purpose of collaboration with the following research program of the Department of Molecular Sciences and Nanosystems.

Abstract: synthesis and characterization of bio-based molecules to be used as additives for setting plaster, maintaining or improving the technical performance compared to synthetic products currently available on the market. Specifically, the research will focus on developing a product that, when added to drywall plaster, increases its fluidity, improving its workability in production processes.

The research activity will include:

1. Study of the raw materials provided by the Client, on which all research will focus.
2. A literature review of the state-of-the-art on plasticizers for gypsum in the drywall industry and drafting of a research plan indicating the experimental techniques to be adopted.
3. Synthesis and/or extraction and characterization of the active ingredients that will constitute the innovative additive being researched.
4. Chemical analyses of the innovative additives produced by the research activity.
5. Physical tests to characterize the improved performance of materials enhanced by the innovative additives produced by the research activity.
6. Return to the client a complete and detailed report describing the research activity carried out and the results obtained.

The amount of the short-term research fellowship is equal to €26.000,00 per year gross percipient and will be subject to taxation according to current regulations. It will be paid in bimonthly instalments after certification of the regular performance of the activity.
