Description

The Venice School of Management - Ca' Foscari University of Venice, as specified in the introduction, hereby calls for applications for no. 1 Short-term Research Fellowship entitled "Leadership in crisis contexts", lasting 12 months – CUP H73C26000730005 – Tutor prof. Sara Bonesso.

The research fellow must perform the following research:

ABSTRACT

Educational leadership in crisis contexts defines the ability of leaders to manage critical scenarios arising from natural disasters, armed conflicts, health crises, or socio-political tensions affecting the academic community. In such contexts, leadership behaviors aim not only to safeguard the safety of students and staff, but also to protect the continuity of educational processes, mitigate the psychological and traumatic impact on the community, and activate interventions for the recovery and revitalization of the educational system in the post-crisis period.

In particular, the unique nature of armed conflicts sets them clearly apart from other emergencies—such as pandemics or natural cataclysms—which generally exhibit a cyclical pattern or a defined timeframe. War generates violence, uncertainty, and a constant climate of fear that indiscriminately affects every stakeholder in the school and university system. Compounding this are the destruction of physical structures and infrastructure, forced displacement, and geopolitical and humanitarian crises. Consequently, educational leaders operating in war zones are not merely called upon to provide immediate emergency responses; they must also take responsibility for maintaining learning pathways and protecting the psychophysical well-being of the community for an indefinite period, working under conditions of persistent vulnerability and a dramatic scarcity of resources.

Despite the crucial importance of educational leadership in war settings, existing literature fails to provide a comprehensive overview of the competencies required of academic leaders to tackle such complex challenges.

This research aims to contribute to this debate by focusing on the future of Palestinian human resources in the Gaza Strip in the post-war period, specifically examining the leadership capacity of higher education systems to foster recovery processes and human capital development to revitalize post-conflict environments.

The approach will be descriptive-analytical, relying on review of existing scientific literature on leadership in crisis contexts and a qualitative study conducted through interviews with industry experts and educational leaders, aimed at developing an interpretive model of effective leadership behaviors to support the recovery and revitalization of educational systems in war contexts and broader crisis scenarios. To this end, proficiency in the Arabic language is required to carry out the research. Ultimately, the research aims to provide actionable support to policymakers in defining effective recovery strategies.

OBJECTIVES:

- Analysis of scientific literature on leadership models, with particular reference to crisis contexts (specifically in wartime settings) and the educational system;
- Definition of the qualitative research design, including the data collection protocol and theoretical sampling framework for conducting interviews with educational leaders and key stakeholders within the Palestinian context of the Gaza Strip;
- Development of a model aimed at identifying the behaviors and competencies of educational leaders that foster the recovery and revitalization of higher education systems in post-conflict settings.

EXPECTED RESULTS:

- Description of the critical issues faced by educational leaders operating in war-affected contexts;
- Identification of effective behaviors and competencies deployed by educational leaders to promote recovery in post-conflict environments;
- Organization of seminars at the Department of Asian and North African Studies and the Venice School of Management, aimed at sharing human resources and leadership practices that emerged from the research project to support recovery in crisis contexts;
- Submission of research outputs to national and international conferences;
- Policy recommendations tailored for policymakers, stakeholders, and higher education institutions to support targeted interventions for training and human capital development in post-conflict recovery settings.

The research fellow must provide the School with the following research output:

- two-monthly reports on the activities (Tot. 6 reports);
- a final report on the activities undertaken, highlighting the results achieved.

This documentation is by way of example and not exhaustive and may change or be implemented according to the needs of the research activity concerning the project and/or the structure that calls for the research grant.
