The expected starting date is 01/10/2026.

The short-term research fellowship is awarded for the purpose of collaboration with the following research programme of the Department of Linguistic and Comparative Cultural Studies

Abstract:

The project aims to investigate the work of enslaved (slaves and captives) in the Mediterranean during the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries. The study adopts both a maritime history and social history perspective, analysing not only labour in ports and on galleys, but also domestic, manufacturing, military and agricultural work. On the one hand, the project seeks to examine this topic availing itself of a corpus of sources already available in digital format (photographed/scanned documents); on the other hand, it aims to develop and apply the skills and methodologies necessary for a comparative social history analysis of the contexts of Cartagena and Genoa, in order to highlight similarities, differences, and local specificities in the employment practices and living conditions of slaves and captives in both places. The identification of religious minorities and ethnic communities to which the enslaved groups and individuals belonged is another fundamental aim of the research.

The fellow will be required to carry out the following research activities:

Furthermore, the research activity should lead to the discovery of hitherto unknown or unexplored archival fonds regarding the work of slaves and captives in other Italian cities.

The amount of the short-term research fellowship is equal to 7.792,67 gross percipient and will be subject to taxation according to current regulations. It will be paid in bimonthly instalments after certification of the regular performance of the activity. Deadline: 24/08/2026.
