The Spring School will offer a deeper understanding of the nexus between language, discourse, power, and sustainability transformations.

Activities will be organized in two main blocks: the first day (May 15, hybrid) will provide an introduction to the development and current trends in ecolinguistic research, as well as to qualitative and quantitative methods for ecological discourse analysis. The second day (May 16, in-person only) will provide participants with the opportunity to experience in an interactive way hands-on methods for collaborative analysis and re-storying of environmental texts and for corpus-based analysis on large amount of textual data.
