

The Ecological Meaning of Work and the Political Ecology of Living Labour

October 22, 2025 - 4.30 pm
Hybrid Event

Venice
International
University

Alexis Cukier, Associate Professor in Philosophy, University of Poitiers

4.30 pm, Room 1G
Venice International University, San Servolo Island

This VIULecture explores how ecological concerns can emerge from the sphere of work, and how workers can give ecological meaning to their activity. It examines the theoretical and political implications of an ecology of labour, with real-world cases from France, including forest workers resisting extractivism, refinery workers opposing green capitalism, and grassroots movements against large-scale water infrastructure.