

Università
Ca' Foscari
Venezia

Dipartimento di Studi Umanistici

Laboratorio demo-etno-antropologico

Lab

Dea

Lunedì 14 febbraio, ore 14.30-16.30

Sala Morelli

Registrazione al seguente link:

<https://unive.zoom.us/meeting/register/tZYkc--uqigqH938qbWDFX91twvQloyYGwyh>

Rodrigo Mena

International Institute of Social Studies of Erasmus University Rotterdam

Annika Schmeding

Harvard University, Society of Fellows

Terranno una conferenza su:

Bargaining Access and Security during In Situ Research

ABSTRACT

Dr Mena will discuss the role of safety and security in (fieldwork/in-situ) research, particularly as an ethical consideration. Also the importance of having a sound risk assessment and ethical and security plan prior to in situ and remote research. His intervention will unfold a discussion over decolonising research methodologies and perspectives.

Dr Schmeding will discuss mid-to-long-term research set ups that prioritize safety for researcher and interlocutors alike. She will also open up about the gendered dimension of access and ethical decision making in working with minorities and vulnerable groups in insecure settings.

NOTE BIOGRAFICHE

Prof Rodrigo Mena is an Assistant Professor at the ISS of Erasmus University Rotterdam, working on humanitarian responses and risk reduction to disasters.

Dr Annika Schmeding is a cultural anthropologist and post-doctoral fellow at the Harvard Society of Fellows, working on vulnerability and resilience among local communities in conflict and post-conflict settings.