GLOBAL ECONOMICS AND SOCIAL AFFAIRS

LEVEL I - III EDITION

PROFESSIONAL PROFILE:

The Master aims to meet the needs of the economic world at a global level, not only by developing high-level management professionals for institutional and private environments that operate at an international level, but also new professional figures such as, by way of example, experts in sustainability and CSR; social accountability consultants; developers of new markets; network management experts; experts in international co-operation for development. The Master is particularly addressed to people who hold positions of responsibility who wish to improve their expertise and consequently their professional status in order to become more competitive in the labour market.

After GESAM, students can continue their studies by enrolling at the Second Cycle Degree Programme in International Relations, with the possibility of having recognized up to a maximum of 48 credits from those obtained during the master.
