THE WYE

The exhibition of Russian artists is dedicated to the experience of life in a variable landscape engendered by a medial civilization. The city today is a constantly updated screen on which advertisement mixes with politics; futurist fantasies – with history; documents – with fictions. The reality of time and place disappears. The mutation of a familiar material urban environment is perceived as a bodily, mental and moral injury, to which each author contraposes his or her act of creation, replacement, substitution... Most of the artists are from St. Petersburg, the former Russian capital connected to the "European stage" of Russia's development and to the hope of its return; the nostalgia for an outgoing nature and the will to create a new one. Art becomes the capital of the world that has lost its identity.
